

Working with Families
29th June 2016, Beyond Limits

Most people came to 'Working with Families' to gain a better understanding Beyond Limits' core values and to help support people they work with.

We asked our attendees how they would rate our course presenters on their delivery style

100% said Excellent

We asked our attendees how they would rate our course presenters on the course material they used

100% said Excellent

100% of respondents said they were 'Very Likely' to recommend this course to others

A selection of open comments from attendees on what they enjoyed, learnt and will take away with them:

"I learnt that the professional side is not always right"

"Families love their members and that individual is perfect to them"

"Positive and constructive feedback is important"

"To ask myself how I would feel!"

"To listen to the individual's needs – compassion"

"To put yourself in the families position – empathy"

"Families matter. Families should be involved. To be honest and communicate properly"

"Labeling de-personalises"

"History of working with families"

"I felt fully involved in the learning and learned lots about self reflection"

"Stop thinking old fashioned/like a professional/in service land"

"Respect. Families are right, even when they are wrong."

"How we are all wanting the same/similar things"

"Breaking down the professional/family relationship"

"More understanding. Realisation of what people go through"

"Self reflecting on what I would do if it were my loved one"

"That the professional over look is the wrong way to look at how we support when thinking of families"

"Remembering that the family is important and knows the individual in a way that I never will"