Summary

This note addresses a range of recent issues affecting parish and town councils. It includes an explanation of what they are and their place in the local government structure; the powers they can exercise; how they may be established and abolished; and how complaints about them may be pursued. It also includes details of some policy issues that have arisen in relation to parish and town councils in the mid-late 2010s.

This note applies to England only.

1. Parish councils

1.1 What are parish and town councils?

Parish and town councils are the tier of local government that is closest to the electorate in the UK. Collectively, they are often referred to as 'local councils'. County, district and unitary authorities, by contrast, are often referred to in legislation and guidance as 'principal authorities'. Parish and town councils are represented by the National Association of Local Councils (NALC), and by county-based associations.

Parish councils may resolve to call themselves 'town',¹ or 'community', 'neighbourhood', or 'village' councils.² A number of parish councils for areas which have been granted city status by Royal Charter are known as 'city councils' (e.g. Salisbury, Truro, Ripon). This is known as the 'style' of a council. It has no effect on the status or legal powers available to the council. The chairman of a town council, or a city council which is a parish council in law, may style him- or herself Mayor.

Elected parish and town councils were first established by the Parish Councils Act 1894. This Act removed all non-ecclesiastical functions from church parish councils and passed them to newly-established local elected bodies, which became known as 'parish councils'.³ Local church bodies are now known as 'parochial church councils' and are not linked in any way to parish and town councils.

The Local Government Act 1972 entirely restructured local government within England and Wales, and it provides the legal foundation for the existence of today's parish and town councils. Large parts of the 1972 Act have now been superseded with regard to principal authorities, but it still governs much of the workings of parish and town councils.

1.2 Where do parish and town councils exist?

In total, there are some 10,000 parish councils in England,⁴ some 730 community and town councils in Wales, and some 1,200 active community councils in Scotland.⁵ Parish councils cover only some 30% of the population of England: historically they have not existed in urban areas.⁶ It is not unusual for elections to parish councils to be uncontested, and for members to be co-opted where the number of candidates is fewer than the number of seats available.

No part of England is obliged to have a parish council. The Local Government Act 1972 requires a parish meeting to take place in all parishes. A parish meeting is a distinct legal entity from a parish council. It must hold two meetings per year, one of which must take place between 1 March and 1 June.⁷ A parish with a population of over 300 may choose to constitute a separate parish council, but it is under no obligation to do so. Where a parish council exists, the parish meeting must still take place, once a year, between 1 March and 1 June, and the parish council must meet, separately, at least once per year.⁸

Parish councils mainly cover rural parts of England. There are a number of localities, principally in large urban areas, which have never had parish councils (or ecclesiastical parishes). Inner London (the area of the former London County Council) has never had parish councils, and parish councils were not permitted in Greater London between 1935 and 2007.

1.3 Charter trustees

Charter trustees are established under section 246 of the Local Government Act 1972. They are established in towns and cities which have a Royal Charter but which have lost their status as local government entities in previous local government reorganisations. They are a residuary category, with only fourteen remaining.

Where a new parish or town council is established for an area with charter trustees, the new body takes on their role and the charter trustees are discontinued. The most recent examples of this are Kidderminster Town Council in December 2016 and Lowestoft Town Council in May 2017.

1.4 Differences between parish councils and principal authorities

A number of provisions familiar from English local government legislation covering principal authorities do not cover, or apply differently to, parish and town councils:

- The legislation regarding executive arrangements (mayors / cabinets) and overview and scrutiny in the Localism Act 2011, originally introduced in the Local Government Act 2000, does not apply to parish councils;
- The requirements for committees to be politically balanced, in the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, do not apply to parish councils;
- English parish and town councils are not covered by the Local Government Ombudsman (see section 6.9 below);
- Limited requirements for audit exist for councils with an income and expenditure of under £6.5 million (which applies to all parish and town councils); see the provisions of the Local Audit and Accountability Act 2014.⁹ Councils with an income and expenditure of under £25,000 are not subject to routine audit (see section 5 below);

⁷ In practice this obligation may be disregarded, and there are no sanctions in existence if a parish meeting is not held.

⁸ See Local Government Act 1972, sections 9-19.

1.5 Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland

The remarks in this paper apply to parish councils in England unless otherwise indicated. 'Community councils' exist in Scotland and Wales: responsibility for them is devolved.

Welsh parish councils were included in the 1894 legislation which created English parish councils. They were renamed 'community councils' by the Local Government Act 1972. Welsh community councils cover some 70% of the population of Wales, existing throughout the country with the exception of the largest cities. The activities of community councils are covered by the Public Services Ombudsman for Wales.

In June 2017, an independent review panel was set up to look at the future role of community and town councils in Wales. Its report was published on 3 October 2018 and presented to the Cabinet Secretary for Local Government and Public Services.¹⁰ The report made a number of recommendations, including:

- Establishing community or town councils in all areas which do not currently have one;
- Encouraging Welsh local authorities to transfer 'place-based services' to community councils wherever possible. These might include street furniture; community assets; museums and libraries; street bin collection and grass cutting; footpaths; open spaces; community transport; and leisure centres;¹¹
- A comprehensive review of town and community council boundaries;
- Mandatory training for community and town councillors, and mandatory qualifications for clerks.

The report also noted that 64% of town and community council seats in Wales were uncontested at their most recent election. (Equivalent data is not available for England.)

Scotland has around 1,200 active community councils, established under the Local Government \(Scotland\) Act 1973.¹² Scottish community councils have no defined functions. Section 51(2) of the 1973 Act specifies:

In addition to any other purpose which a community council may pursue, the general purpose of a community council shall be to ascertain, co-ordinate and express to the local authorities for its area, and to public authorities, the views of the community which it represents, in relation to matters for which these authorities are responsible, and to take such action in the interests of that community as appears to it to be expedient and practicable.

In 2011, the Scottish Government set up a short-life working group to examine the future of community councils. This produced a report in 2012, which recommended better sharing of good practice and experience between community councils, and more joint working between them and local authorities.¹³ A community councils website, and a portfolio of model documents, was set up in the aftermath of the working group.

In Northern Ireland, civil parish councils did not form part of the Local Government Act 1898, which reorganised local government throughout Ireland. There has therefore never been an equivalent of the directly elected English parish council in Northern Ireland. No proposals were made to introduce them in the 2014-15 local government reorganisation, nor in the preceding one, which culminated in the Local Government Act \(Northern Ireland\) 1972.

2. The precept

Parish councils may raise a 'precept' on the council tax bills produced by their local billing authority (unitary authority or district council). This is essentially a demand for a sum to be collected through the council tax system. Council tax-payers cannot refuse to pay it, and the billing authority cannot refuse to levy it. It is the only source of tax revenue available to parish councils.

Historically, parish councils were able to raise a 'rate' from the time of their establishment in 1894: this was linked to their then duties under the Poor Laws. Rates were levied on non-domestic and domestic property until 1990, when the rates were replaced by the Community Charge and the National Non-Domestic Rate. Since then, parishes have precepted on domestic property only, via the Community Charge and then the council tax.

Charter trustees also have the right to precept on their principal authorities. Twelve set a precept in 2018-19.¹⁴ The Middle Temple and Inner Temple have the right to precept upon the City of London.

In 2018-19, data on parish precepts showed that a total of £518 million was collected via the parish precept (including Charter Trustees and Temples), which is £33 million higher than in 2017-18. This was 1.8% of total collected council tax. 8,839 parish councils raised a precept.¹⁵ The average precept for 2018-19 on a Band D property was £64.05, a rise of 4.9% compared with 2017-18.¹⁶

In 2018-19, the largest amount precepted by a parish council was £3.01 million, and the lowest was £18. The largest amount per Band D household was £306.38 and the smallest 24p. The largest taxbase of a precepting parish was 37,047, and the smallest 1.4.¹⁷

¹⁴ These were: Worksop; East Retford; Bath; Ellesmere Port; Durham; Grimsby; Cleethorpes; Bexhill; Grantham; Margate; High Wycombe; and Chester. Mansfield and Scunthorpe charter trustees did not set a precept.

¹⁵ See the statistical release Council Tax statistics for town and parish councils in England:2018 to 2019.

¹⁶ See Council Tax levels set by local authorities: England 2018-19 - revised.

¹⁷ See the statistical release Council Tax statistics for town and parish councils in England:2018 to 2019. The taxbase is the number of households liable for the precept, expressed in terms of Band D households. Households in council tax bands other than D are expressed in terms of the proportion of a Band D bill that they pay, as set in section 5 (1) of the Local Government Finance Act 1992. Therefore, for instance, a Band E property counts as 11/9 of a property when counting the taxbase. This is why the taxbases quoted here have decimal points.

3. Parish council powers

Parish and town councils' powers are generally concurrent with (i.e. equivalent to) those of district councils. In practice, most lack the capacity to undertake the provision of public services, and concern themselves with local environmental, community and amenity issues. Some larger town councils have substantial staff teams and may run a number of local facilities. The only power that is available only to parish councils and not to other tiers of government is the power to obtain and supply land for allotments if local demand cannot be met.¹⁸

The National Association of Local Councils published a report titled Points of Light in 2018, highlighting several dozen examples of the type of work done by parish councils across England.

Parish councils may use the General Power of Competence provided in Part 1 of the Localism Act 2011 (see also Library briefing paper SN/PC/05687, The General Power of Competence). A parish council wishing to use the power must formally resolve that it is an 'eligible council'. The qualifications for eligibility are that the clerk has completed a course in local administration, and that at least two thirds of councillors have been elected (i.e. not co-opted).¹⁹

The general power of competence is available in England only. Clauses 23-30 of the draft Local Government Wales Bill, published by the Welsh Government in 2015 but not yet introduced, would allow Welsh community councils to exercise the power providing two-thirds of their members had been elected (i.e. not co-opted) and the council clerk held a relevant qualification.²⁰

Parish councils are entitled to make proposals for changes in legislation under the Sustainable Communities Act 2007 and its successor, the Sustainable Communities Act 2007 \(Amendment\) Act 2010. Initially they were not included amongst the local authorities permitted to do this: this was changed by the Sustainable Communities \(Parish Councils\) Order 2013 (SI 2013/2275).²¹

Parish councils may request the 'listing' of an 'asset of community value' under the Community Right to Bid, introduced by the Localism Act 2011. Under the same Act, they may also exercise the Community Right to Challenge. Further details are available in the Library briefing paper on Assets of community value and the Community Right to Challenge. At the time of writing, these provisions apply in England only.

As mentioned, parish councils' only taxation power is the precept, but gifts from parishioners, or raise money from grant-making bodies or Government initiatives. They may set up lotteries to raise funds locally, though they must hold a licence from the Gambling Commission under section 98 of the Gambling Act 2005. They may also set up a public subscription for a specific purpose, to be subscribed to by electors in the parish.

Either the parish council itself, or individual parish councillors, may act as trustees for a local charity. This task fell frequently to the 19th century ecclesiastical parish councils, which had a leading role in poor relief. Parochial charities today are subject to charity legislation (including the Charities Act 2006) and to regulation by the Charity Commission. Parish councillors who act as trustees must distinguish their role as councillor from their role as trustee, even if they were appointed to represent the parish council on the charity.

4. Creating new parish councils

NALC has suggested that there are some 270 more parish and town councils in England than there were just over 15 years ago.²² Some of these were established in the wake of the creation of additional unitary authorities in 2007-08: for instance, when a unitary Wiltshire Council was created and Salisbury District Council was abolished, Salisbury City Council, covering a smaller area than the district council, was established. Town councils are to be established in Christchurch and Weymouth in 2019, in tandem with local government restructuring in Dorset. Each year, a small number of parish councils is abolished, and a small number are 'grouped' (i.e. a single council is established for a number of parish areas).²³

Both the Coalition Government and the preceding (2005-2010) Labour Government spoke favourably of parish and town councils. The 2006 local government white paper, Strong and prosperous communities, stated:

We will make it clear that there will be a presumption in favour of the setting up of parish councils so that local authorities will be expected to grant communities' requests to set up new parish councils, except where there are good reasons not to, and that existing parish councils are not to be abolished against the wishes of local people.²⁴

The Coalition Government's 2013 consultation paper on setting up new parish councils said:

We believe that localism is best achieved when it is led by the local communities themselves. We see town and parish councils as playing a vital role in helping local people to make this happen; it is for this reason we want to support those neighbourhoods who want to set up a parish council.²⁵

Technical guidance and support for setting up new councils is available from the National Association of Local Councils (NALC).²⁶

Parish councils do not have the power unilaterally to move from one principal council to another. The town of Yarm held a referendum in May 2014 on moving from Stockton Borough Council to Hambleton District Council in North Yorkshire. The proposal was supported by 1,465 votes to 177 on a 24% turnout. However, such a change would need to be recommended by the Local Government Boundary Commission for England and approved by Parliament.

There have been instances of parish areas, or parts of parish areas, moving between principal councils in the past, but this has normally happened as part of a wider boundary review or a process of creating unitary authorities. For instance, several parishes moved from North Yorkshire into the York City Council area in the 1990s, when York City Council became a unitary authority.

4.1 Community governance reviews

The procedure to create a new parish council can be found in the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007. Under the 2007 Act, a principal council in England may undertake a 'governance review', either on its own initiative or in response to a petition from local electors (see section 4.2). The governance review must examine whether one or more parish councils should be created, divided or merged in order to ensure that local government arrangements are 'effective and convenient and 'reflect the identities and interests of the community in that area'.²⁷ Guidance was published in March 2010.²⁸ The guidance recommends that a community governance review should take place every 10-15 years: thus many reviews can be anticipated during the 2015-2020 Parliament.²⁹

In conducting the review, the council must consult local electors and any other persons or bodies which are considered by the council to have an interest in the review. The guidance emphasises that councils should take various factors into account, including the impact of community governance arrangements on community cohesion, and the size, population and boundaries of a local community or parish.

The review may recommend that the parish remains as it is; that the area of the parish be altered or merged with another parish; or that the parish council should be abolished. For instance, a town council may seek to extend its area to cover a newly-built housing estate on the edge of the town; or a newly-expanded village may seek to 'secede' from an existing parish council area.

There is no guarantee that a community governance review will result in a new parish.³⁰ The guidance states that 'clear and sustained' support for any abolition (i.e. over two terms of elected office) would need to be demonstrated.³¹

4.2 Petitions

A council which receives a valid petition is under a duty to carry out a community governance review as requested by the petitioners, unless it has already conducted a review of the same area, or of substantially the same area, during the previous two years. Once the review has started (that is, the terms of reference have been published), it must be concluded (i.e. the recommendations must be published) within 12 months.

A petition may relate to any area, whether currently parished or unparished, within the geographical limits of the local authority.

²⁷ These phrases are from section 93(4) of the 2007 Act.

²⁸ DCLG/LGBCE, Guidance on community governance reviews, March 2010

²⁹ Ibid., p. 13

³⁰ Ibid., p. 27-8. Recent examples where a review rejected a new parish council include Margate and Bexhill.

³¹ DCLG, Community governance reviews: guidance, 2010, p.34-5

Principal authorities may themselves implement the outcome of a review by order, provided that they have carried out the required consultation.

Petitions should be submitted to the principal council (the district or unitary authority), and it will be for them to take the matter forward by means of a community governance review. A petition must meet the conditions set out in section 80 of the 2007 Act in order to be valid. It must define the area to which the review is to relate and may include a map. It must specify one or more recommendations which the petitioners would wish a review to consider making. Government guidance explains that those recommendations can be about a variety of matters, including:

- The creation of a parish;
- The name of a parish;
- The establishment of a separate parish council within an existing parish;
- The alteration of boundaries of existing parishes;
- The abolition of a parish;
- The dissolution of a parish council;
- Changes to the electoral arrangements of a parish council;
- Whether a parish should be grouped under a common parish council or de-grouped.³²

Minimum levels of support for petitions are set out in section 80 of the 2017 Act. These were amended in 2015 (see section 4.3 below):

- If the petition area has fewer than 500 local government electors, the petition must be signed by at least 37.5% (previously 50%) of the electors;
- If the petition area has between 500 and 2,500 local government electors, the petition must be signed by at least 187 (previously 250) electors;
- If the petition area has more than 2,500 local government electors, the petition must be signed by at least 7.5% (previously 10%) of the electors.

4.3 Changes to system for establishing parish councils

The Government published a consultation paper entitled Making it easier to set up new town and parish councils in October 2012. This paper identified a number of concerns with the existing system for establishing parish councils. The consultation closed on 9 January 2013,

³² DCLG/LGBCE, Guidance on community governance reviews, March 2010, para 40 and the Government published a response on 9 September 2013.³³ The following changes were then made in 2015:³⁴

- The petition thresholds were reduced: see section 4.2 above;
- Community groups which have produced a neighbourhood plan will not be required to produce a petition in order to trigger a governance review: they will merely need to submit a 'community governance application';
- Reviews must take a maximum of one year from the receipt of a valid petition (previously the limit of one year ran from the start of the review itself).

4.4 Creation of new wards

The Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 also governs the creation of new wards in parish councils. Under section 90 of the Act, a community governance review may recommend that a parish council should continue to exist, but that changes should be made to its electoral arrangements. Section 95 specifically requires the review to consider whether wards should be created,³⁵ and that it must consider 'local ties' and boundaries that are 'easily identifiable'. Under section 86 (6) of the 2007 Act, the Local Government Boundary Commission for England must give its assent to any changes in electoral arrangements proposed under a community governance review.³⁶

4.5 Small parishes

There is provision in the Local Government Act 1972 for the dissolution of the council for a small parish. Where a parish has 150 or fewer electors, the parish meeting may apply to the district or unitary council for the parish council to be abolished.³⁷ There is also a power for parish meetings to apply to the district for two or more parishes to be grouped together under a common parish council, or for existing grouping arrangements to be changed or abandoned.³⁸

4.6 Alternatives to parish councils

Principal councils must also consider other (non-parish) forms of community governance when conducting a review. These may be seen either as alternatives to, or stages towards, the establishment of a parish council. The guidance mentions the following alternative forms of governance:

1. Area committees;
2. Neighbourhood management arrangements;

³³ See DCLG, Government response to consultation on making it easier to set up new town and parish councils, September 2013; HCDeb 9 Sep 2013 c39WS

³⁴ See the Legislative Reform \(Community Governance Reviews\) Order 2015 (SI 2015/998). The response to the consultation was published in May 2014: DCLG, Proposal to use a legislative reform order to set up town and parish councils, 2014.

³⁵ This includes consideration of new wards. In many parish councils, all the councillors are elected in a single ward.

3. Tenant management organisations;
4. Area/community forums;
5. Residents' and tenants' associations;
6. Community associations.³⁹

4.7 Parishes in London

The Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 reintroduced the power to create parish councils in Greater London, and introduced it for the first time in the former London County Council area. The last parish councils in the Greater London area were abolished in the 1930s following the creation of several new boroughs and urban districts. Since the passage of the 2007 Act, one new parish council has been established in Greater London, in Queen's Park. Campaigns in Deptford and London Fields in the early 2010s appear to have stalled.

Latterly, a petition to create a new local council, Spitalfields Town Council, was validated on 31 August 2018, and Tower Hamlets Borough Council resolved to undertake a twelve-month Community Governance Review of Spitalfields on 29 September 2018. Two consultation phases are to take place, the first of which began on 8 October 2018.⁴⁰ NALC described the Spitalfields campaign as:

the most robust campaign for a new local council in London since the creation of Queen's Park Community Council in Westminster in 2014.⁴¹

⁴⁰ See Spitalfields Neighbourhood Planning Forum.

⁴¹ See NALC, "New London town council could be on the cards".

5. Complaints regarding parish councils

Constituents may wish to complain about the decisions, the procedures, or the conduct of members or staff of their parish council. There are few remedies available in this regard outside of the four-yearly elections to the parish council.

The route to make a complaint depends upon the subject of complaint: there is no single organisation which oversees parish councils. The Government has taken the view that parish councils are accountable to their electorate principally through the ballot box. The most recent Parliamentary Question on the issue of complaints was answered as follows:

There are various mechanisms in place for members of the public to make complaints about their town or parish council.

These include: using the parish council's complaints procedure; raising the matter at the annual parish meeting; questioning, or making an objection to, the auditor during the public inspection period of accounts; or by joining with a group of local electors to call for a parish poll on the issue. In instances of councillor misconduct, complaints can be made to the principal council's monitoring officer who can investigate.

Central Government does not have the power to intervene in parish council matters and believes that the current local system of redress is proportionate to the sector and consistent with this Government's principles on localism.⁴²

Complaints about the behaviour of parish councillors, or employees of the parish council, should be addressed to the chair of the parish council in the first instance.

In general, it is not possible to have a parish council's decision reversed at a higher level unless it can be demonstrated that the decision is unlawful. Like other public authorities, parish councils are subject to action in the courts and judicial review. Though each parish council has a relationship with the district or unitary council in whose area it lies, the district or unitary council has little power of control or direction over the parish council. Concerns over the legality of parish councils' actions can be referred to the monitoring officer of the district or unitary authority in the area.

Larger parish councils must appoint an auditor. Allegations of financial irregularities in a parish council can be reported to the auditor, who must then decide whether to investigate them. Parish councils with an income and expenditure under £25,000 are not subject to annual audit, but must still appoint an auditor, who is responsible for investigating any allegations of mismanagement. This category of parish councils is also subject to the requirements of the Transparency Code for Smaller Authorities: see Library briefing paper 06046, Local government transparency in England.

17 Parish and town councils: recent issues

Parish councils must establish a code of conduct for councillors, but they may opt in to the one operated by their district or unitary authority. That authority must investigate conduct-related allegations against parish and town councillors. Further information is available in Library briefing paper 05707, Local government: the standards regime in England.

The standards regime covers co-opted members as well as elected members. Schedule 2 of the Relevant Authorities \(Disclosable Pecuniary Interests\) Regulations 2012 (SI 2012/1464) lists the categories of pecuniary interests which must be disclosed by members of parish councils. Under section 33 of the Localism Act 2011, parish councils are permitted to grant a 'dispensation' to councillors to allow them to continue to take part in discussion on an issue in which they have a pecuniary interest.

A parish poll (i.e. a referendum) can be demanded on any subject by ten electors at a parish meeting. The poll must be organised by the district or unitary council in the area, but the parish council must pay. The outcome is not binding on the parish council. Further details are available in the Library briefing paper Local government: polls and referendums (see also section 6.7 below).

6. Parish and town councils: recent policy changes

6.1 Council tax referendums

The Government published initial proposals for referendum thresholds for parish and town councils in 2017-18 in a technical consultation in September 2016, in advance of the 2017-18 local government finance settlement.⁴³ The consultation proposed to extend the council tax referendum regime applying to county, district and unitary authorities to certain parish and town councils. Parish and town councils with a Band D precept above £75.46,⁴⁴ and that had a total precept for 2016-17 of at least £500,000, would have required a referendum if their council tax precept was to be increased by 2% or more and more than £5.00 on a Band D property.

The proposals were attacked by the parish and town council sector.⁴⁵ In the provisional local government finance settlement, published in December 2016, these proposals were 'deferred'.⁴⁶ The Government subsequently committed not to revisit the issue until the 2021-22 financial year. In a statement to the House of Commons, the Secretary of State said:

This is subject to the sector taking all available steps to mitigate the need for council tax increases, and the Government seeing clear evidence of restraint in the increases set by the sector as a whole.⁴⁷

6.2 Parish council funding of churches

An issue arose in the late 2010s regarding the legal power of parish councils to fund repairs to local churches. This is a grey area in the law, with two statutory provisions pointing in opposite directions.

Section 8 of the Local Government Act 1894 provides that parish and town councils cannot give funding to ecclesiastical charities. There is a competing provision in section 137 (3) of the Local Government Act 1972 that allows parish and town councils to give funding to charitable bodies. Awareness that the law is unclear has discouraged many parish councils from providing funding for churches, in case they attract a legal challenge. Councils concerned over the legality of proposed donations should take legal advice

The 2017 Taylor Review, 'Sustainability of English Churches and Cathedrals', addresses this issue:

⁴⁷ HCDeb 19 Dec 2017 c919

Evidence submitted to the Review suggested that there is considerable confusion as to whether the 1972 Act supersedes the Local Government Act 1894, and that the 1894 Act is still perceived as a barrier, preventing investment in church buildings by local authorities.

Clarification on this point should be given, whether by repealing section 8 of the 1894 Act, or by the issue of guidance. This should clarify that local authorities can invest in church buildings in accordance with Section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972.

Additionally, repeal or the issue of guidance should clarify that certain parish councils are also able to fund church buildings using powers contained in the Localism Act 2011.⁴⁸

A detailed account of the issues can also be found on the Law and Religion blog, dated March 2017.

6.3 Council tax support and precept levels

Local council tax support schemes replaced council tax benefit from 1 April 2013. The funding provided for council tax benefit was passed to local authorities. A side-effect of the ending of council tax benefit was a reduction in the council tax base. The council tax base is the taxable capacity of a given area, normally expressed in terms of Band D properties. Council tax benefit was paid via a cash payment into the individual recipient's account. Therefore, if a resident was in receipt of council tax benefit, this did not change the council tax base.

From 2013-14, the council tax base reflected the actual amounts paid by residents who pay less council tax as a result of local support schemes. As a result, the council tax base decreased in most areas (though not in all: this depends on local circumstances). Where it has decreased, the same level of parish council precept produces less revenue, from the same number of properties, than it did prior to 2013-14.

A DCLG consultation in August 2012 stated that the Government was minded to prevent this situation, by protecting the calculation of the precept from the changes in the council tax base caused by localisation. This would mean the amount of precept collected would be unaffected.⁴⁹ This was supported by a large majority of responses to the consultation.⁵⁰ However, the Government response to the consultation, published in November 2012, reversed this position.⁵¹ Hence, where the council tax base is reduced, parish and town councils now receive less money from the precept than previously.⁵²

The funding for council tax support schemes provided to billing authorities for 2013-14 included a sum in respect of the funding that would be lost to parish councils as a result of this decision. However, the Government did not oblige billing authorities to pass this sum on to parish and town councils.⁵³

From 2014-15, funding for council tax support schemes – and the sums intended for parish and town councils – has been rolled into general local authority grant funding. It is therefore not possible to identify a specific amount which is intended for use for council tax support schemes. Nevertheless, the issue continued to attract controversy. The National Association of Local Councils (NALC) claimed that £40 million of the 2014-15 local government finance settlement was earmarked for parish and town councils, but only £31 million was passed to them by billing authorities.⁵⁴

6.4 Parish councils and business rates

In 2014, a formal proposal was made to permit a share of business rates to be directed to parish and town councils. This was made by Sevenoaks Town Council, under the Sustainable Communities Act procedure. Sevenoaks Town Council claimed to have had support from over 400 organisations. The idea recalls the pre-1990 rating system (see section 3 above), under which parish and town council precepts applied to both domestic and non-domestic rates. The proposal was rejected by the Government.⁵⁵

6.5 Parish councils and neighbourhood planning

Under the Localism Act 2011, parish and town councils may develop a 'neighbourhood plan'. Neighbourhood plans must be in broad conformity with the local structure plan. A neighbourhood plan may be developed in consultation with the community, and it must then be subjected to an examination in public. It is then subject to a local referendum, and if a 'yes' vote is obtained, it will become the land-use plan for the parish area. Neighbourhood plans may also be developed by neighbourhood forums where no parish council exists. Further information is available in Library briefing paper 05838, Neighbourhood planning.

In addition, in areas where there is a neighbourhood development plan in place, the parish council will be able to receive 25% of the revenues from the Community Infrastructure Levy arising from the development that they have chosen to accept.⁵⁶ Under the proposals the money would be paid directly to parish and town councils and could be used for community projects such as re-roofing a village hall, refurbishing a municipal pool or taking over a community pub.⁵⁷ Where no parish or town council exists, the guidance states that:

Communities without a parish or town council will still benefit from this incentive, with the local planning authority retaining it and spending it in accordance with the wishes of the community.⁵⁸

The decision to establish a Community Infrastructure Levy is taken by the principal council, not the parish council. Further details are available in Library briefing paper 03890, Community infrastructure levy.

6.6 Cheques

Until 2014, parish councils were required to make all payments by cheques signed by two councillors. This requirement dated from section 150 (5) of the Local Government Act 1972. The Legislative Reform \(Payments by Parish Councils, Community Councils and Charter Trustees\) Order 2014 (SI 2014-580) removed this requirement for both England and Wales.⁵⁹

6.7 Parish polls

The Local Government Act 1972 permits a poll (i.e. a referendum) to be held on any matter at the request of ten electors, or one third of electors present (whichever is the lower number) at the parish meeting.⁶⁰ Section 42 of the Local Audit and Accountability Act 2014 permits the Secretary of State to amend these provisions by regulations.⁶¹ This followed suggestions that vexatious use was being made of parish polls by local electors with an axe to grind. In October 2018, Local Government Minister Rishi Sunak told the NALC conference:

You told me that Parish Polls needed reforming – we’ve listened and we’re now updating the rules to modernise them and ensure they better meet your needs. I hope to introduce new regulations on this as soon as parliamentary time allows.⁶²

A consultation was issued in late 2014, closing on 30 January 2015, but the Government has taken no further action as yet.⁶³

The Law Commission’s interim report on its review of electoral law, published in February 2016, recommended that the Government should define more specifically which matters can be subject to a parish poll:

In our view, under the current law, a parish poll question cannot lie outside the proper range of decision making by a parish council, or be devoid of practical application. Nevertheless, our view is that it would be helpful if the Government were to define the circumstances in which such a poll might be called. Given that this is a matter under review, we will make the general recommendation that legislation should define the issues of parish concern that may be put to a parish poll.⁶⁴

6.8 Electronic agendas

In January 2015, the Government made a Legislative Reform Order covering England, permitting parish and town councillors to receive agendas electronically if they so choose.⁶⁵ Prior to this, the Local Government Act 1972 required council meeting agendas to be supplied to councillors in paper form.⁶⁶

6.9 The Local Government Ombudsman and parish and town councils

Parish and town councils in England do not fall within the remit of the Local Government and Social Care Ombudsman. In March 2015, the Government issued a consultation on extending the remit of the Local Government Ombudsman to certain parish and town councils.⁶⁷ The consultation proposed to bring 'larger parish councils' within the Ombudsman's remit. It invited views on whether this should be done, and on how 'larger parish councils' should be defined: this might be via a population threshold, or via a threshold related to the size of the parish council's precept. The consultation suggested a population threshold of 35,000, and/or a precept of £1 million, might be used. A council which came under the Ombudsman's remit would remain under its remit until the next census data is published.

The consultation closed on 30 June 2015, but no Government response to it has been published.

The Government published a draft Public Service Ombudsman Bill in December 2016, which set out its plans to introduce a new Public Service Ombudsman. The draft Bill would have extended the jurisdiction of the Public Service Ombudsman to all parish and town councils.⁶⁸ It has not yet been introduced to Parliament.
