Introduction

The Association of Yachting Historians, with the active support of Lloyd's Register Group Ltd, as well as numerous libraries, yacht clubs and individuals, has undertaken to scan the entire series of Lloyd's Register of Yachts (94 volumes), together with all the annual supplements which were published during the course of each year (some 157 supplements were issued). Since no institution can claim to have a complete set of supplements, tracing the full set proved to be a long and laborious exercise. In addition, the Association has also scanned all material linked to the registers, such as the booklets of sail numbers and yacht flags which were occasionally published separately from the main register. The total number of pages scanned is in excess of 104,000. All pages showing yacht flags have been scanned in colour.

When the main register ceased publication, a series of 18 registers of classed yachts were issued and these too have been included.

History

Lloyd's Register of Yachts was published annually from 1878 to 1980, except during the two World Wars. Although the amount of information on each yacht evolved over the years, in essence it provided details of construction, dimensions and ownership of most pleasure craft, as well as identifying those which had been subject to a Lloyd's survey. The annual registers were usually updated during the year by the issue of supplements. These listed new vessels, changes of ownership or recorded the fate of vessels.

It was up to the owner to provide the information. Certain designers and builders as a matter of course provided the necessary details and the dimensions they gave were accurate. Data provided by owners could be less so.

Initially, it was intended that the register should contain all sailing yachts irrespective of size. In 1948 it was decided place a lower limit of 300 square feet of sail area or 25 ft waterline for power vessels. If the vessel belonged to a subscriber then no limit applied. In 1974 the limits were increased to 350 square foot of sail area or 27 ft waterline respectively. The first volume detailed some 1,400 yachts. By 1980 the figure had risen to 12,000. The explosion in popular yachting in the 1970's meant that the Register was unable to keep all the entries up-to-date and in 1980 the decision was taken to cease publication.

American Yachts

Details of American yachts were included in a separate section of Lloyd's Register of Yachts from 1879 to 1904, in all totaling 1,600 pages. Thereafter many American yachts were included in the main body of the register. To meet the needs of North American yachtsmen, in 1903 a separate series was began, Lloyd's Register of American Yachts, published in New York until 1977. If the yacht in question was large (over 75 gross registered tons) or was originally built in Britain then its entry also appeared in the register published in Britain.
