

Open Call for Papers

Journal of the National Institute for Career Education and Counselling: October 2017 Issue

In order to enable a wide and varied spectrum of contributions, there is no specific theme identified for the next issue of the journal. Accordingly, papers are invited on any subject related to career development.

Topics could include:

- Innovation in concepts or theories
- Current labour market issues
- The organisation, management or marketing of career support services
- Public policy and careers work
- Specific contexts for practice (including school; university; welfare-to-work; careers within organisations)
- Innovation in service delivery; new tools, technologies and models
- Global or international perspectives
- Social justice, critical pedagogical and emancipatory practices
- The role of learning in the support of career development
- Fresh critical perspectives
- New case studies and other empirical work
- The training and education of practitioners
- Professionalism
- Any other topic related to career development

Potential authors should note the following deadlines:

	Deadlines for submission
Expressions of interest supported by an article title and brief abstract (100 words)	22nd May 2017
Full draft article	19th June 2017
Final manuscript	14th August 2017

For enquiries and expressions of interest, please contact the editor,
Pete Robertson: p.robertson@napier.ac.uk