We believe this policy relates to the following legislation:

- Education (Schools Act) 1992
- School Inspections Act 1996
- Education (School Inspection) Regulations 1997
- School Standards and Framework Act 1998
- Education Act 2005
- Education Act 2011
- The Independent School Standards 2014

The following documentation is also related to this policy:

We believe that self-evaluation is at the centre of continuous school improvement as it identifies good features and those issues where further work is needed in order to raise standards and improve the quality of education. School self-evaluation is an established part of the development planning cycle and is essential to good management. This results in a self-evaluation statement which is based on the inspection judgements in the Ofsted evaluation schedule. From this statement we are able to write a school improvement plan that is constantly monitored and clearly sets out how the school will address the identified priorities of school improvement.

Self-evaluation is a regular part of the school's working life. Everyone connected with the school must assist with the identification of priorities of improvement, monitoring provision and assessing outcomes. Therefore, self-evaluation should involve staff at all levels and take account of the views of pupils, parents, governors, employers and the local community. To be effective the self-evaluation process must be open and honest with judgments being made by using measurable performance data, which will identify trends over a period of time.

As part of the school self-evaluation process we will use lesson observations, discussions and questionnaires with all stakeholders, scrutiny of pupils work and inspection trails to provide evidence for the school self-evaluation statement and the school improvement plan.

By undertaking a thorough school self-evaluation process we aim to be judged at least good in all school inspections by ensuring that standards for all pupils are higher than schools of a similar size and that standards continue to improve faster than the national trend.

We as a school community have a commitment to promote equality. Therefore, an equality impact assessment has been undertaken and we believe this policy is in line with the Equality Act 2010.

We believe it is essential that this policy clearly identifies and outlines the roles and responsibilities of all those involved in the procedures and arrangements that is connected with this policy.
